

Acquisition International selects John Romans as 2016 CEO of the Year from Minnesota

JULY 2016 - Following months of examining the achievements of thousands of business leaders, and looking at the contributions they have made to their companies, as well as their accomplishments over the course of the year so far, Acquisition International (AI) announced that John Romans was selected as 2016 CEO of the Year from Minnesota.

AI's Jack Clarke wrote, "AI's CEO of the Year awards were founded to identify and recognise the outstanding leadership of CEOs across all industries and jurisdictions and will be commending just one CEO from each region and each sector. In terms of determining those most deserving of this coveted accolade we take into consideration significant achievements from the past calendar year, other accolades won, length of service, company performance since you took position at the helm (or since day one for those who have founded their businesses) as well as client testimonials and recommendations."

Biomedix by Collaborative Care Diagnostics is a leader in healthcare risk assessment and information technology (HIT), enabling care providers to collaborate and cost-effectively save patient limbs and lives. The patented Biomedix information exchange is comprised of easy-to-use, diagnostic devices such as PADnet, which are connected to a secure and HIPAA-compliant cloud-based communication platform that enables PCPs and medical specialists to collaborate in the early detection, treatment, and management of patients with chronic conditions such as peripheral artery disease (PAD) and chronic venous insufficiency (CVI). With over 1,000 active test sites and nearly 1 million studies performed in the US alone, the Biomedix network is positioned to improve clinical outcomes more cost-effectively, on a global scale.
